“ I will remember Daniel as the fearless little kid who would always get back up on the horse after being thrown off.

“ In my recollections Dan has always been and hopefully will always be about 17, wearing jeans with a white t-shirt showing lanky arms hewn hard tossing countless hay bales. And rounding out that fine visage are sparkling eyes and a chiseled chin housing a calm manly smile. In my memory hes the kind of young man that'd make any mother or father proud. Next to him and five years younger, it seemed that all boys would be out of their league and somewhat in awe of just how cool cool could be. I wish our paths had crossed more in our adult years; Id have had much to learn from him Im sure. Rest in peace Dan. Sincerely, Scott Winger

“ Dan was my employee, shop foreman and friend. From day one Dan helped me make the best trumpets in the world. Then for the last twenty five years we continually improved them. His dedication to helping others experience a more profound musical experience was truly a gift. All of us knew Dan through his quick wit and widely varied interests outside of music. Over 25 years we had time to converse on an endless stream of topics. Dan was never at a loss to express the most outspoken Haswellian opinion on every topic we discussed! He was wise and thoughtful enough to immediately encourage anyone he heard use the word "hate" to pick a better word. And he was humble enough when we would compliment him on his craftsmanship to always say, "Blind squirrel finds the acorn every once in a while!" Dan may no longer be here physically, but his spirit remains with us stronger than ever. For this and for the twenty five years we shared I am eternally grateful.

“ I remember Dan best from the two summers I spent on the farm, helping out with the horses and haying while he worked on his tan mowing the golf course. We had a lot of good times that last August before he went off to the University of Wisconsin and I went into high school. He was kind to me, and fun. Bon Voyage, cousin.

“ I was so sorry to hear of Dan's death. Our parents have been friends beginning at Windsor Church since the 1960's. I saw Dan last summer when he was visiting his folks and just happened to be out for lunch at Fitz's on the lake.(Lake Wisconsin) when I was there with one of my sons and my Mom and Dad. It was great to see him and talk. It was a wonderful summer day to be out for lunch and experience the joy of summer in Wisconsin. Charlene

“ Daniel was my youngest brother. I will miss his wit and presents. Dan was an amazing artist as a musician and later again as a craftsman building Monette Trumpets. As young men, we went sailing in my boat on Devils Lake, WI and skiing everywhere in Wisconsin during the Winter months. I will pray for his soul and that he is at peace now and forever. "I'll miss you Dan!"
