“ Ms Dolores had a wonderful spirit that brought music into our household. We will cherish her always. A tree growing in her honor fills our heart.

“ I worked closed with Dolores at Portland Winterhawks. She was always a job to work with and Dolores will be sorely missed. She is such a kind and patient person. So good at her job and paid attention to details. I could not get 1 cent passed by her without her noticing. Heaven is lucky to have her, earth will miss her!!!!

“ Ms Dolores was our beloved piano teacher. She brought music into our household. My girls and husband loved walking down the street every week to her house for piano lessons. She would walk them home after class. They always wanted to walk Max. My kids told her many stories and she always had valuable things to share. If we loved her so much, I know there were so many that loved her the same. This is a video from the beginning of piano lessons with my oldest daughter, Leanne. Thursday, November 12 was to be their lesson. Theory was on the chair and ready to go. We love you and will continue playing. Audrey sits down throughout the day and plays Yankee Doodle. Thank you for sharing your talent with us all.

“ We were so fortunate to have Ms. Dolores as our piano teacher just down the street. She taught me and my 2 daughters piano for almost 1.5 years. My daughters enjoyed her lessons so much and they would practice at home especially my 6 year old who was so enthusiastic about piano lessons. It really brought music to our home. [L:L] [SEP:SEP] Ms. Dolores would quiz us on memorizing our notes and eventually each of us earned a Dairy Queen card that she got us for passing the quiz! It's these little things that she thought of that creates these fond memories of appreciation for the kindness that she brought to the people around her. We're so sad to lose her. Thanks for giving us the gift of music Ms. Dolores!

“ Whenever I gather with my friends and they start complaining about their mother-in-laws I always feel awkward and quiet because I had nothing to add to the conversation. Dolores welcomed me into her life with open arms. She taught me to make split pea soup, how to can peaches, and introduced me to the musical Fidler on the Roof. We traded prayer requests, stories, and clothes. She came to the hospital in the middle of night to watch my son when I went into the labor with my second. She showed up to every concert, program, and event for which we were involved. She generously gave to the causes we cared about and she cheered our efforts. She taught my children to play the piano and she raised my husband to be an amazing man, husband, and father. You could say I lost my husband's mother. You might say I lost my children's grandmother. In truth I lost my genuine, dear friend. She is so loved and so missed. But she isn't really lost. I know exactly where she is. I am so very thankful for Christ's promise of heaven.

“ Dolores was such a sweet lady. I will miss her at choir and ladies Bible study and church. She shined brightly with Christ's love. My sincere condolences to her family. May God comfort you with the knowledge that she is playing the organ in the heavenly choir ❤️.

“ When I was in elementary school, the band program was cut the year before was old enough to join. My mom volunteered to run an after-school band program herself. She worked with the school district to acquire instruments, recruited students to join, learned the basics of playing each instrument, worked with students one-on-one, held rehearsals, organized concerts, and more. Even as a child I recognized the enormous amount of effort she put into this project, all so that the other students and I could learn to play music together. She instilled in me the value of music, which has greatly shaped who I am.

“ A fun memory I have of my mom is when Ben, Deanne, and I were small and we were visiting the beach house, Mom would sometimes say something like, "It's the third Tuesday of the month, and it's a full moon, so we might be able to find pirate treasure at low tide." We'd go out and search the tide pools, finding various coins (all relatively new US currency, oddly enough). Mom did this over the course of several years before Ben and then Deanne and I finally realized that she was dropping them when our backs were turned.

“ As Jeremy's mother-in-law, I was very fortunate to know Dolores and see the special bond she had with him. She visited with us a couple of times when visiting Jeremy, Val and the kids and we came to know what a lovely lady she was, generous and sweet, caring and fun. She always had an idea or activity for the grandkids or provided a comfy lap for them while being read to. We shared a tremendous love for our grandchildren. I'm so happy I found this photo from 2015, it shows us sitting together, sharing cuddles with our granddaughter. I remember we passed her back and forth to keep her happy. This picture reminds me of the love we shared as mothers - for her son, my daughter and our grandchildren.

“Dolores was my mother-in-law. When I was a teenager on the opposite side of the country from my own family, she readily welcomed me (and my crazy mutt, Harley) into her home for Thanksgiving, Christmas, Easter, Sunday dinners, and more. Whenever Jeremy and/or I had a concert or church event, we could count on her to be there to support either or both of us. When we got engaged and married, she welcomed me into her family with open arms. Jeremy was close with his mother. The love and respect that he has for his mother is one of my favorite things about him-it is one of many things that make him a great man. And I know she was proud of him as a son, a musician, and a husband and father. Even though we were far away, I know she loved Sebbie, Lucy, and Renzi with her whole heart. Just before she passed away, she sent them a Halloween package (like she has every year) filled with goodies that they love. We are so sad that she never got to meet Renzi in person. I know Jeremy and his mother both enjoyed chatting every couple weeks about everything on their respective ends of the country. She loved hearing about what the kids were up to, about Jeremy's academic and career pursuits, and life in general, and she kept us posted on goings-on up here in the Pacific Northwest. We are going to miss those phone calls. It still doesn't seem possible that she's gone. We are going to miss her so much.
