“ I met Ella almost 10 years ago, we were putting up a new fence that was in her SW corner of her yard. She invited me to come back and visit - I did and a wonderful friendship began. Ella was an amazing, strong, stubborn, out spoken, caring woman I have ever met. When I had breast cancer and lost all my hair, she said "I don't think your hair will ever come back" and proceeded to give me her wig catalogue. She always told me to put rouge on because I was so pale and to not forget the lipstick. I went to visit Ella on 10/22, just 5 days before she passed. Her eyes were bright, said she felt good. Ella was an inspiration to me, to continue on her own until she broke her hip, then had caregivers. As soon as she could, she cut back their hours and number of days. Fiercely independent doesn't begin to describe her and staying in her own home as so important to her. I will miss her. My deepest condolences to her family, JoAnne Sutton The Neighbor Across the Fence (in the back SW corner)
