“ Every time Papa comes to my mind its memories of trains and the miniature houses he loved and the (what I'd call) old school video games and his office with his blueprints ha always loved showing me and explaining what each mark meant on the blueprints. I was 5 yrs old and could tell you which way a door was supposed to open in a house off a blueprint how many women my age (35) can say that. I was always a inquisitive little girl and would always be the one asking why and he was the perfect Papa for my never ending questions. He had the patience and understanding that was needed. He always made me feel understood and never showed any judgment. I will forever remember all you lat me learn from you Papa... Till we meat again xoxo..
