“ My darling Kelsey, god how I miss you and my heart is just broken knowing I can not see you again. There are no do overs this time. I drive the car, our car and remember the laughter, your sense of humor always so sharp as we drove. I wish we'd all wake up and learn this nightmare is over. I wonder what lessons are to be learned from your death?? Is it you who was to learn or your momma or me? who knows...well apparently you do now. I do not know if you can hear my words or have any idea how much I miss you but I sure do. I love you so much Kelsey. I pray that you will somehow be able to watch over your Mom. She is not doing ok Kelsey, not really but who could after loosing their daughter, you!?! I know that you always wanted to have a baby and I feel sad you did not get to experience this. Perhaps you hold answers now, I sure hope so. Grandma is not the same anymore. Ever sense you left here actually and the day you left a part of me also died. No one seems to come here so I think this will be a place I can pay tribute to you. Somehow writing on your page helps...Starnge because I write just on word pad and the healing or whatever is just not quite the same. Remember when we watched Bunny? And Baggage? I can not watch that yet because all I do is think of you. I love you Kelsey so much...I miss you more then ever I could have imagined. I will write again soon...As always, you remain in my heart. Love, Auntie Pambi

“ So loving, so fun, so generous, so beautiful and Kelsey you will be so missed. You are far too young to have departed this world and I am going to miss you so much. My heart will always hold that void of you until we meet again, and it is then that I will again feel your arms around me and wrap you up for a tight hug. I love you Kelsey Welsey..I will forever cherish the beautiful memories of you. All my love, Auntie Pambi
