“ It's taken me awhile to get to a place where I could actually say something that felt real and not me just putting on a face to make people think I'm doing good and that I've grieved the loss of you and moved on with life. Truth is I've needed you more than you realized and you weren't there and I can't pretend like that hasn't affected me in a negative way. I'm to a point that I'm sick of feeling this way and I need to release this pain because it's a burden that I can no longer carry on my shoulders. So I'm planning a trip down to come see you.. I need to give you my forgiveness and accept the love you weren't able to give me in the last part of your life. It's been hard dad.. I haven't been very good at seeing my value and I think a lot of that has to do with how I didn't feel valued by you. I need to let that go and try to remember that you did love me and that you did value me. I wish we could have had more time together but life is unfair and these were the cards we were dealt and even though you had to fold early in the game.. but I'm still in it and I just need to figure out how to get through life with the cards I have left in my hands. We'll talk more when I visit. I'll see you soon. I love you. Your youngest ☐

“ I miss you cuz there's not a day that goes by that something don't remind me of you ! I remember when we were young all the good times we had !! Pretending like we were Donny and Marie Osmond and setting up stage in our garage and charging a nickle to all the neighbor hood kids to get in . I remeber collecting money for the boy and girl scout lol !! You and I were always together growing up as kids . I love you cuz 💕 until we meet again
Love you cuz Renee
