PATRICIA RUTH BROWN

Patricia Ruth Brown was born in Dickenson, ND, on March 16, 1933 to Mildred Olson and Silas Gregg. She was the fourth born of five children; Silas (Bud) Gregg, Arletta Gregg, James Gregg, and Morse Gregg all who preceded her death. She enjoyed school and twirled the baton as a mascot as a very young girl at Dickenson High School. When she was twelve years old, she moved to Vancouver, WA. She attended McLaughlin Junior High School and Vancouver High School both of which she was involved in multiple school activities. Patricia then attended Clark College and Washington State University receiving a degree in teaching. During her high school and college years she worked at a cannery, furniture store, and hospital. She taught elementary school in Portland Public Schools, and Vancouver School District. She married on June 29, 1957 to Norman Robert Brown who preceded her death. Patricia and Norman both spent many years as educators in the Evergreen School district; Patricia as a kindergarten teacher and Norman as a principal. She is survived by two daughters, Leslie Lee and Susan Esteb. In addition, she is survived by three grandchildren, Rachel Lee, Natalie Esteb, and Zachary Esteb. The family would like to thank Grandpa's Place for the love and care Patricia received.
