“ I felt a tinge of sadness and regret when I learned that my wife's mother had passed on, despite the fact that I had never met her. Any family member, no matter how distant, is a component of one's self. When that component is suddenly missing, the void is always felt. I can only begin to imagine the sense of sudden emptiness felt by those who have been Peggy's immediate family for over half a century. Time will fill the void, of course; it always does. However, time never fills it entirely. We always retain a small portion of the void. Amazingly, that portion which remains is always just perfectly sized. It is not too small, nor is it uncomfortably big. It is always just the right size to snugly tuck our memories into for safekeeping. The void closes in around these memories and seals them tightly, like pearls snuggled in an oyster's shell. These memories are our legacy, and like an oyster's pearl, they are warm, luminous, comfortable and eternal. I know that Denni and Albert's pearls will just a bit bigger than everybody else's, and just a bit more warm and lustrous.

“ Dear Denni This has been a long journey for you and your mom. I hope she had a peaceful passing, and that you and your father have comfort knowing that she is in a better place. Love, Merrienne.
