“ I spent a lot of time with Ricky. We had our ups and downs. I always enjoyed eating dinner at his house with his family.

“ I apologise for not getting in touch or at least remaining in contact with so many people specially Ricky in my later years during and after school. I loved how he could be one of us bonified weirdos and still could make the popular kids and our own crowds laugh! He certainly had a powerful gift of gab, he could stand up on stage and make the whole place give a damn about the underdogs. I feel ashamed for not reaching out more and seeing how he was doing. Love you good sir, we'll always have the jumps and cracking jokes together.

“ Ricky was my best friend in highschool and he was such a goofball. He performed stand up comedy for the talent show and got a lot of laughs. He always had a good sense of humor. I remember hanging out at my place with him a lot and riding the bus together. I met him because we were on the same bus to school. In high school for a while he wore skinny jeans and had an emo phase. I remember going to a punk show with him and moshing and having fun. We were at the solid state and it got strange in there and we bailed before the final band, a bunch of skinheads showed up and started a big fight. The club got shut down because of the brawl, I am glad we had to sense to get out of there together. Rest in peace dear friend, wish after high school we didn't drift so far apart. I wish we could've reconnected.

“ When Ricky and I would sit on the back porch the squirrels and bluejays would gather in the yard. Around 20 species of birds would come to feed there. There were a couple of squirrels Ricky named and they would come right up to him. It was a happy time for us. That seemed like the only time he had peace and tranquility in his life. I love you baby boy. God bless you and may you be at peace.
